PRESERVATION EXTRAORDINARY—THE CORPSE OF A LADY BURIED FOR THIRTX-SIX YEARS FOUND INTACT.—It is stated that a body buried in the Methodist Protestant cemetery at Avondale somewhere about 1840 has been found almost perfectly intact 1840 has be John F. Wiltsee, the undertaker, exhumed the coffin last week for the purpose of reintering the body in Spring Grove. It was found that the stone coffin was It was found that the stone coffin was too heavy to permit of removal, and it was secondingly left behind. But the cloth covering of the walnut shell appeared so perfectly well preserved that it was determined to open the coffin. To the astonishment of all present the remains were, to all appearance, almost perfectly preserved—so perfectly, in fact, that any one who had known the deceased must have recognized the features. The fiesh appeared to have dried without shrivelling to any marked degree. The white kid gloves in which the hands of the dead woman had been encased were but slightly stained, and the white cambric shroud slightly discolored; but the body appeared sound. The screws of the coffin appeared sound. Such is the testiment of various witnesses. The body timeny of various witnesses. The body had never been embalmed .- Cincinnati Com-

Indian Agent Clum, of Arizona, arrived at Washington a few days since with a delegation of twenty-two Apache Indians, which he proposes to take to the Centennial to demonstrate what can be done toward civilization with a wild Indian. Three years ago these Indians, who are a part of Cochise's band, were wild and murderous, and exceedingly hostile, but now are civilized. One of them, Taga, a son of Cochise, died with pneumonia, and was buried in the Congressional Cemetery.

The three captors of Major André have all now been honored with monuments. A marble cenotaph covers John Paulding's grave, in a church-yard at Peekskill; a plain monument of marble Isaac Van Wort's grave, at Greenburgh; and a costly monument above the grave of David Williams, at Schoharie, was unveiled at that place on Saturday last. Near the grave of Williams is the old fort, still perfect, constructed in 1762 and taken by the Indians during the
